A KNIGHT'S LEAP AT ALTENAUR

- DY REV. HENRY KINGSLEY. The forman bath fired the gate, men of mine,
And the water is spent and uone,
so bring me the cup of the red Aarwine
I shall never drink but this one.

" I've stood my time. I've fought my fight, I've drunk my share of wine; From Trier to Kolin was never a knight Lived a merrio, life than mine.

"Those joys have fled, to return no more, The old saddle-tree that bore me of yore

"And now to show burgher, and bishop, and priest How the Altenahr hawk can dio:
they smoke the old faiconer out of his nes He must take to his wings and fly.

* So saddle me up my old war-horse; And lead him round to the door; He must take to-night such a leap perforce As never-man took before. They saddled him up in warlike shine;

The knight stood in the door,
And he took such a pull at the red Asswine
As never man took before. He led the horse up the steps high and wide,

And spurred him over the wall— Out into the storm, out into the night, Three hundred feet of fall! They found him next morning in the glen,

And not a bone in him whole; And may God have mercy far more than men On such a brave rider's soul.

CHABLOTTE CUSHMAN'S PRAIRIE RIDE.

While en route to the White mountains last summer, we made a short stay in Boston. Among the various objects of interest visited was Mount Auburn. the famous burial-place of that city and the oldest garden cemetery in the United States.

As we were slowly riding through one of the beautiful avenues of this grand necropolis we came upon the grave of Charlotte Cushman, who in her day was one of the greatest of living actresses. She was a pure, noble woman, distinguished alike for her intellectual greatand goodness of lieart.

At the time of our visit to Mount Auburn no monument had been placed in the Cushman lot. The last restingplace of this gueen of tragedy was simply covered with long, dark, shining sprays of myrtle. But there is soon to be erected over her grave an obelisk of Hallowell granite, an exact representation of Cleopatra's Needle, as it stood at Heliopolis.

One of our party was the Superintendent of a Western railroad, who, before his promotion to that responsible office, had been a locomotive engineer. He was greatly interested in visiting Charlotte Cushman's grave; and, after we And returned to our hotel in the city. he gave us the following personal reminiscence of this remarkable woman;

"When I was running a locomotive on the Chicago and Great-Eastern rail. road. I received an order one day to to take a special train of two cars, containing Charlotte Cushman, her luggage Chicago.

"The great tragedienne had lost a connection, and was very unxious to goin the shortest possible time by a special. train. It was a cold, rough afternoon, a had day for railroading on the prairies special that had to 'make time,' with and bade me good by, the fierce winds beating and howling over them, as I believe they never do sesson to fill her engagement that night in Chicago, t with the least delay possible. I had carefully inspected my engine and for my fireman I selected the very best man to 'make steam' that could be found in the railroad corps at that city. But, in mite of these precautions, about 4 o'clock to a dead halt out on the open prairie. I ferring pleasantly to that trip across the umped down from my cab, with oil-can in hand, but the mighty gusts of wind that swept against me made me glad to crawl back into the shelter of my cab.

"Presently one of the brakemen, with his cap tied on his head with a stout scarf, came forward to tell me that Miss Cushman desired to see the engineer in the passenger car. I sent back word that I could not leave my engine-that I would do the best I could with our train, and that nothing could be said or suggested, even by the distinguished passenger, which would make the least gain in our headway.

The brakeman took himself off, and I was not at all pleased, I must confess, when Jake, my-fireman, who was at the moment looking out of the cab window, down the track in our rear shouted above the gale:

"'There is the lady herself coming now to the engine. With her skirts and things, she'll be surely blown across the prairie!

"Sure enough, there she was, looking as if she were the spirit of the wind. At first she walked resolutely and majestically forward, the wind-storm seeming to make no impression on her stout, erect figure. Soon, however, the queenly form succumbed to the sweeping wind, and she began to cling to the sides of the cars.

"After we had dragged her up into the cab and she was sheltered from the gusts, she stormed about the delay enough, it appeared to me, to subdue any or all of the elements. She tried high tragedy on me and my good en-

As my engine was now regularly laboring along I glanced back to the train, and saw Miss Oushman standing at the forward end of the car nearest us (which was half baggage and half smoking car), watching us intently through the top window of the door.

"She nodded and smiled whenever I. ooked that way, still remaining at her post as we shot along with increasing peed. Her great, speaking eyes were ugleam with excitement; and there was look of suppressed power in her face that I never saw on any other human countenance. I felt that she could, if she so pleased, have carried us along by the force of her own will.

"We reached Chicago at 7:30 p. m. The latter are law unto themselves, and terror to the people of the adjacent Territories, who, in turn, are regarded much in the light of cut-throats by civilized communities. The Public Lands Commissioner recommends the attaching of this hitherto unknown country to New Mexico, and its inhabitants brought under the laws of that Territory. This plan-does not contemplate too great rapidity in civilizing the new region, but as rapid, perhaps, as the conditions will admit.

A DAY ON GHANO ISLAND.

My idea of a guano island had always on that, it was vory rocky and covered with a white substance resembling mortar before the sand is mixed with it. I imagined, too, that it exhaled an odor differing somewhat from the orangegroves of Tahiti. Had I not been told that I was on a guano island I would not now have known it from the surroundings. Instead of being rocky the soil was mellow and dark, and everywhere vegetation was most luxuriant. The air was remarkably clear and pure. During a walk around the island I then learned that there are two kinds of guano; or, rather, that of certain qualities which all guano possesses some of these qualities predominate in that found in a given locality, while guano taken from islands differently located possesses in a much stronger degree some other essentials. Thus the gunno of the islands off the coast of South America, exposed to the rays of a tropical sun, where the surface of the land is never cooled; and where rain seldom or never falls, possesses the strongest ammoniacal properties. Not only the excretions of birds are deposited there, but the birds themselves come there to die: and eggs have frequently been taken out a little below the crusts which form over these deposits that are almost pure ammonia. The guano of these islands has a strong, pungent odor, and is white and light brown in color. But the guano of the islands of the Southern Pacific is made up of decomposed coral, forming mostly phosphates of lime and magnesia. It is entirely inodorous and of a darkbrown color, resembling well-pulverized loam. It is believed that the birds, which in large numbers inhabit these islands, living, as they do, almost entirely on fish, deposit phosphoric acid on the coral, and also leave the bones of the fish, which they cannot eat. These decompose the coral, and thus form the phosphates which give to the guano its value. The guano is separated from the coral in the following manner: There is quite a force of hatives employed, who gather the earth in large heaps, and then screen it in the same manner as fine coal is separated from coarse. The screens are about eight feet by three, and the iron gauze covering them is fine allowing only the guano or fine portions of the earth to pass through, and leav-

That we may be understood, we will ask the reader to cook two turnips in two different ways. The first to e peeled and sliced, and left to soak in cold water for an hour or more. The slices are to be boiled until quite tender, and then are to be drained and nicely mashed with butter. This is the most common method of cooking, and it has the demerit of washing out the gum and sugar and other fine constituents of the root, and consequently the flavor is very much reduced. The other root is to be washed quite clean, but is not to be peeled, or out, or soaked. Boil it whole in its "jacket." It will take twice as long to cook as the one that was cut. When, by trying it with a fork, you find it quite tender, take it un peel it, press it moderately, and mash it with butter. You will be surprised at the difference. Instead of being, as perhaps you will expect, "strong," "rank," or "bitter," it will be deicious, full-flavored, and will contain all the nourishment that was in it before it was cooked.

ANOTHER METHOD.

A method for teaching children readng, spelling and writing, "all at once, has been practiced by a teacher in the West. She prepares on a slip of cardboard a word which may be made the principal one in a short sentence, as for instance, "dog." The word is writtenand printed upon the slip, so that the pupil may learn the elements of penmanship with reading and spelling. The scholars are made to read, spell, and write this word until they have learned t thoroughly. Then another slip with the word "the" upon it is given them, and they are taught its meaning, use and relation. Other words are given in the same way, and the scholar is then taught to put them together to make sentences. Thus, in every new word that comes up the scholar is interested and his interest is preserved all through.

SPANISH STOMACHIC AND CORDIAL. The well-known fragrant garden vorit, the sweet-scented or lemon verbena, seems to have other qualities than those of beauty and odor, for which it is usually cultivated. The author of n recent work, . "Among the Spanish People," describes it as being systematically gathered in Spain, where it is regarded as a fine stomachic and cordial. It is either used in the form of a cold decoction, sweetened, or five or six leaves are put into a teacup and hot tea poured upon them. The author says that not. only is the flavor delicious, but that if it be used one need never suffer from flatulence, nervousness, dirarhea, or loss of appetite.
